Mixed mode requires the server to be able to receive requests on notification connection	Stack implementation needs to code this extra work		Has multiple implementations, so not impossible
Mixed mode requires can cause notifications to be delayed	More important information may get delayed	Deployments concerned with this can limit their mix-mode commands to those related to notifications	This problem will occur in notification only streams as well. Not all notifications are of equal importance
End-less reply does not have a way to modify the subscription	Loss of notifications during tear down; complex procedures to learn to fake functionality; Forces use of new connections	Define elements of procedure or guidance in draft to explain potential workarounds	I predict years of having to explain this to people.
Endless reply does not have unsubscription method	Forces termination of session; can't reuse session	Define elements of procedure or guidance in draft to explain potential workarounds	I predict years of having to explain this to people.
